BIO:

Ian has almost 30 years experience in people management and development, latterly at board level. He is qualified in people management, business excellence and business coaching, and is an internationally recognised assessor for the Investors in People quality standard.

Ian’s experience is in all sizes of organisation in all sectors, advising over 200 organisations in Britain, Australia and New Zealand. Clients value his ability to bring a new perspective to their organisation, and to bring innovative solutions to leadership. He has won business excellence awards for customer service and as a result he is a business mentor.

Ian’s philosophy is based on kairos – the timing of change and intervention. He is the author of Kairology – a book focused on personal leadership; Kairos Coaching Cards programme; and Manhood, Marriage and Fatherhood programmes which are being delivered to male prisoners in the context of personal leadership and change.

His approach to leadership is also aligned with world-renowned Professor John Adair, and Ian uniquely represents John’s action-centred leadership approach, books and programmes in New Zealand.

His passions are leadership, people and organisation development, about which he writes, speaks, and consults. He is passionate about improving the quality of contribution that people can make in organisations, and organisations to their people.

Ian is an engaging speaker who creates space for people to learn easily how to become who they really are and all that they can be.
